Mr. Disraell's Explanation of Earl Derby's

Bill.

London, March 18-Midnight. In the House of Commons this evening the Derby overnment asked formal leave to bring in their Reform ill to-morrow, and Mr. Discael, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, explained the features of the proposed bill, introducing copious statistics to support the principles on which the bill was grounded.

Mr. Gladstone made a short speech, in which he said he thought that the figures of the government were absurd, but he would defer all debate on the question until the bill came before the House.

A COLORNO SEXTON SENT TO THE PENITENHARY. -Thos. Spier, a colored man, employed for the past year in the African Methodist hipsecopal church in Bridge street, was taken before Justice Cornwell yesterday on the complaint of his sunplayer, who charged him with robbing his money drawer. Mr. Hedges watched the accused and saw him open the drawer with a skeleton key. Detective Corwin took Spier into custody, and, on searching his room at the church, about $50 worth of house furnishing goods belonging to Mr. Hedges was discovered. Judge Cornwell sent Spier to the Peattentiary

Officer Utler, who happened to be in the vicinity at the time, was called in, and on the companing of Werner took Justice Buckley into custody. On reaching the station house the complainant found that his heaf was still in its proper place; that he hadr't lost his nose, teeth, or the sight of his optics. The walk to the station house had also cooled his angry foelings, and he defined to ness the charge. Justice Buckley was therefore discharged.

No Clue to the Murderer—A Coroner's Inquest to be held on Thursday, &c.

The man found at the corner of Grand and Ninth streets, Brooklyn, E. D., on Monday night with a mortal wound in his neck, and who died soon afterwards as reported in yesterday's Herald, has been identified as of ago. He was an unmarried man, employed in the rope walk of the Mesers. Waterbury, on Bushwick avenue, and resided at the corner of Cook and Merrali

Phillip Leddy, brother-in-law of deceased, states that he was a Leddy, brother-in-iaw of deceased, states that he was a sober and inofensive man and had saved up the sum of $200. Early on Monday morning Pitzpatrick left his bearding house for the purpose of visiting New York, to see the St. Patrick's parade. He was accompanied there by a friend named Martin Brady, from whom he became separated during the day, and the next thing known of his movements was his appearance at the corner of Third and Grand streets, E. D., in company with two others, in angry conversation. This was between eight and nine o'clock in the evening. About aim o'clock officer Orpea, of the Forty-fifth precinct, met him near Grand street, in company with it man of similar appearance in size and dress, with light hair, turned under at the edge. Both men appeared to be intoxicated and were talking loudly, when the officer told him to pass on and keep quiet. To this remark Fitzpatrick made an insulting reply but kept on his way. About half-past nine o'clock officer Andrew Gidernisew, of the same precinct, while standing on the northeest corner of Grand and Ninth streets, observed deceased staggering toward him from the direction of Nisth street, as though he was intoxicated. When he arrived within a few feet of the officer he raised his arrive when the former caught him in his arms and supported him. The officer then for the first time noticed blood dripping from the unfortunate man's neck, and he placed his handkertchef to the wound to stanch the flow, and, calling assistance, conveyed him to the station house in Fourth street. Fitzpatrick was at that time in an insemble condition, and although surgical aid was promptly at hand, he expired in a few moments.

Coroner Smith took charge of the body and empanciled a jury, who met at Firemen's Hall yesterday afternoon and adjourned, without taking testimony uniti one o'clock on Thursday next.

THE SONS OF TRECERANCE .- A large and lively public day evening, in the Lecture room of Rev. Dr. Ganse's church, No. 100 West Twenty-fourth street. None of the church, No. 100 West Twenty-fourth street. None of the clergy, several of whom had promised to address the meeting, appeared, except Rev. Charles B. Smyth. Mr. Stump, a German, and Mr. McIlroy, from Canada, laymen, made speeches, and were both were highly comprimented for their eloquence. Mr. Smyth described temperance as "self-government," condemned the drinking of brandy, whiskey and alcohol as poisonous, saying, at the same time, that he sometimes takes wine. "for his stomach's sate," as the Apostle saws, but advised that no one should use even it, unless he could get "the pure blood of the grape." Variety was given to the proceedings by an opening prayer and the singing of pealins, tog-ther with a duct by two young gentlemen. All of the speakers were frequantly applauded, and at the close several names were added to the society's roll.

The Farmers' Chun.—The attendance at the Farmers' mers' Club yesterday was larger than usual. A number of new inventions was exhibited and several subjects was formally and unanimously endorsed as, all things considered, the most reliable of the different varieties. It had not only held its own since its introduction, but was steadily gaming favor. Communications were recurved recommending Graham bread as cheaper, more wholesome and more readily made than any other; stating that sorghum might be made than any other; stating that sorghum might be made without difficulty by the use of ordinary vessels, and comfirming the opinion, expressed some weeks since by the Club that the disease known as "bollow horn" in cattle was attributable to improper feeding and want of care. In answer to an inquiry it was stated that stables in the basements of barns were equally wholesome with those above ground, it properly ventilated and cleaned. The question of poultry growing, the order of the day, came up and was discussed with much interest, some very due imported Freuch fowls being exhibited. The fraudulent dealing common among aurseryment in sending to their customers trees and plants improperly taken up and carelessly packed was strongly denounced by several members of the Club. The investigations are completed, and the claims of one bank—the Commonwealth—is contested by the committee; while the accounts of fourt en other banks which held certificates of indebtedness, will not be closed until the question of taxing these certificates has had legal decision. About half the insurance companies claims have been allowed. The other companies, like the banks, had certificates of indebtedness as part of their capital, on which the disputed taxes were laid.

Organso or a New Banking House.—The new building at the currer of Canal and Leight streets, just completed for the Union Dime Savings Bank, was taken possession of last night by about three hundred guests of both sexes, who had been invited by the managers of this institution to admire the costly fittings and furniture of the contiting room and offices, and inaugurate their dedication to doil Mammon by light and mirthful festival. The entertainment partook somewhat of the nature of an impromptu affair, and was noticeable as exhibiting on the part of the participators that degree of enjoyment and neglect of the statelier proprieties characteristic of such occasions. Dancing was engaged in up to a late hour, and a coil centation discussed between sets. A full description of this building has already been published in the Harato.

THE EDWARD CODEY COTERER. - The members of this THE EDWARD CODEY COTERTS.—The members of this favorably known organization held their annual reunion at the Central Hall last night. An unusually tasteful specimen of typography in the shape of an order of dancing gave the programme of Terpuishorean exercises, whose fulfilment was only interrupted by reason of the craving for a supper, usually incidental in hall rooms, towards the midnight hour. The gathering was exceedingly select, and the affair most enjoyable. Bunting for Supervisor, Chancey Smith for Justice of the Peace, James Hance for Assessor, and the remainder of their ticket. The meeting was called to order at eight o'clock, when Henry B. Scranton was chosen chairman and George Parker secretary. Mr. Scranton, having been so requested briefly stated the objects of the meeting, and in the course of a few remarks stated that he had no particular objection to the greater number of the candidates nominated by the regular democratic convention, but he certainly, in common with many of his friends, deemed it of paramount necessity, in the interests of the people, to stand by the ticket which they had assembled to ratify. He concluded by saying that the ticket about to be submitted to them "was not, like the Black Crook, of spurious character, but, a La Rev. Mr. Smyth, in accordance with the naked truth." The ratification then took place, when the meeting was dissolved. A large number of the friends of the regular democratic party were in attendance and viewed the proceedings throughout with marked interest.

Among the gentlemen a certain Mephistopheles looked diabolical, and tried to fascinate hosts of Margarets. Mr. Louis Figuire wore a chain of sausages, oysters, radishes, and other delicate edibles. He represented a pic-nic.

The lady of the house was a priestess of Isis; her costume had been designed by herself, chiewore on her head the sacroal bits, and on her gold wand the symbolic threumon. The perfect oval of her features was drained with the lines bandlets; her arms were bare. Over her woollen tunic flowed a rich purple mantle, with heavy, deep folds, and allogether she was a most unposing model for an artist versed in antiquity.
